Cimalbosco is a locality on the road from Schilpario up to the Vivione Pass. Driving up the road through the magnificent fir forest, one crosses the area where the iron mines are located; marked trails allow visitors to observe the old furnaces for roasting iron ore and to visit the remains of mining buildings. After Fondi, where there are well-restored cottages once inhabited by miners, the road, with a series of hairpin bends, reaches the Malga Cimalbosco and, near a bar-restaurant (red hut), we can park.

The red hut where we park.

We come across a signpost informing us of the direction to follow, following the CAI path 428.

We admire the landscape around us.

We cross the small bridge and continue to the right.

We now pass the "Malga Campelli di Sotto".

After the Malga Campelli di Sotto (1640 m.), we reach a clearing.

The path now becomes cemented to allow the ascent.

On a boulder we admire the bronze statue of the Madonnina dei Campelli, the work of Scalvino sculptor Tomaso Pizio (40' from the parking lot).

On the left we admire the summit of the "Cimon della Bagozza".

Continuing on the dirt track, which here makes a wide turn, in about 30 minutes we reach the Malga Campelli di sopra, set among the pastures of the Alpe Campelli (1815 m.).

We reach Malga Campelli di Sopra.

We continue on and pass the malga.

Sharpening our eyes, we can see the village of Colere.

We reach a signpost informing us that we are approaching the pass.

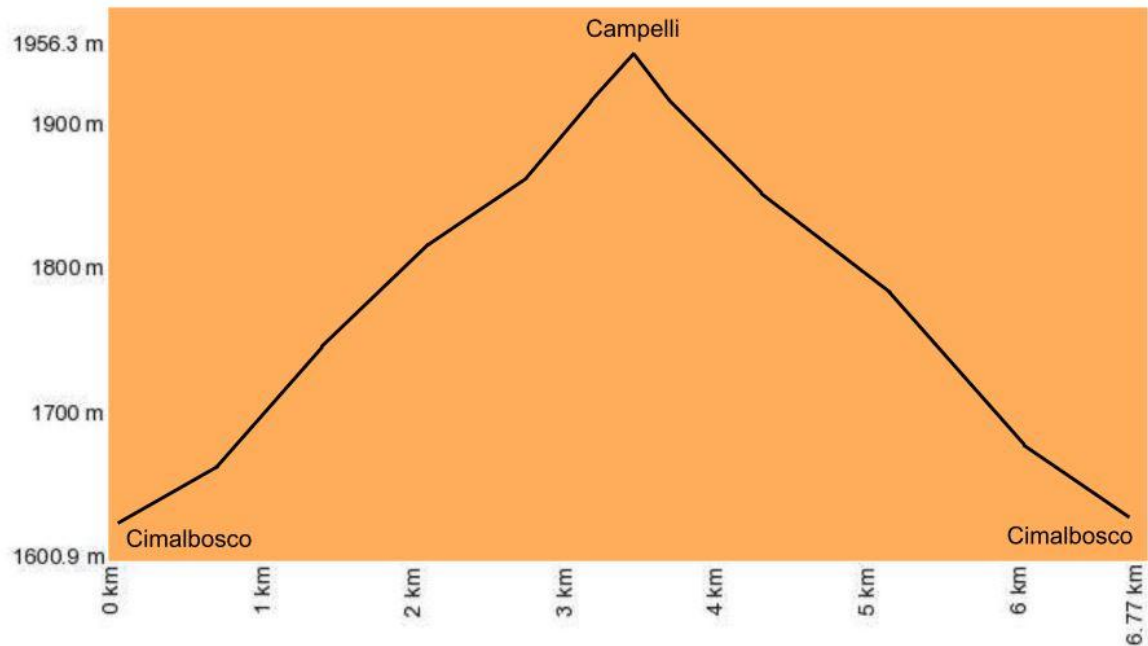

A second signpost welcomes us on the last stretch.

We finally reach the pass and in the distance we see the Adamello group. We return following the outward route.
